Local man charged in nationwide child porn investigation

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

A Didsbury man is one of eight Alberta men charged as part of a Canada-wide child pornography investigation, police said June 19.

James Robert Jensen, 30, faces one count of accessing child pornography, one count of possessing child pornography and one count of distributing child pornography following an investigation by 40 police agencies across Canada.

The Integrated Child Exploitation (ICE) team of the Alberta Law Enforcement Response Team (ALERT) conducted the investigation. Didsbury RCMP assisted with two search warrants in the community.

"We facilitated the arrest, but it was all ALERT's investigation and ICE. We assisted with the search warrants, his arrest and release," said Cpl. Clint Gulash of the Didsbury RCMP.

Jensen turned himself in to the Didsbury detachment on May 22.

RCMP announced on June 19 that five children were removed from harm and over 150 individuals were arrested or are presently under investigation as part of the national coast to coast operation, called Operation Snapshot III.

The operation, which began in February 2014, involved over 40 police agencies and was coordinated by the RCMP's National Child Exploitation Coordination Centre (NCECC).

Ride raises $105,000 for cancer research

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

The Rural Ride For Dad raised $105,000 for men's cancer research on June 21 as it wound its way through Central Alberta.

About 225 riders participated in the event, which had two departure points - one in Olds and another in Red Deer - and wound its way through Central Alberta before concluding in Didsbury in the late afternoon. The Red Deer ride started at the south Walmart and went east to Pine Lake and west to Caroline before concluding in Didsbury, while the ride that started in Olds went south to near Cochrane and east to Three Hills and Linden. Each of the rides totalled about 350 kilometres.

Gil Ehns, co-chair of the Rural Ride For Dad, said the Olds ride started out cold in the morning but it got better as the day went on.

"When we started out in Olds it was really tough. It was cold, it was rainy, it was barely above freezing (and) you could see your breath. But they stuck it out," he said. "It's a good day when you can get that many people out there and raise money for that cause. We all like to ride our motorbikes and try to ride as much as we can, so why not ride a motorbike and raise money for a good cause while we're at it," he said.

Ehns said while everyone who participated came out to have fun, the main purpose of the event was to help save lives by raising awareness and funds for men's cancers. The "man van", which didn't make an appearance at the event last year due to the flooding, did come to Didsbury on June 21 and about 50 men had PSA tests completed.

Ehns said the community support has always been strong, and was again this year. The Three Hills Thrashers and Mountainview Colts raised about $25,000 combined at their annual charity game again near the conclusion of the Heritage Junior Hockey League season and businesses have always been good supporters of the ride.

Didsbury man pays dog bylaw infraction

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

The Didsbury man whose dog bit a senior citizen in May has paid the bylaw infraction in full, avoiding a potential court hearing on the issue.

Johh Boyda was cited under the town's dog control bylaw after his blue heeler bit Laverne Guertin in April. Guertin received injuries from the incident that needed hospital treatment.

Boyda paid a $540 fine in May for allowing his dog to bite a person or another animal. The dog in question was euthanized following the incident.

Poker ride raises funds for fireworks at rodeo

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

A total of 24 riders took to the trail on June 15 raising funds for a fireworks display to be held August 15 in conjunction with the Didsbury rodeo, which takes place from August 15 to 17.

The riders travelled on horseback for about three hours adjacent to Rge. Rd. 22 crossing over Highway 582 before turning around and returning to the start.

"We were fundraising for our Thunder on the Prairies, which is our fireworks display that we put on every year at the rodeo on (August 15)," said Rhonda Davison, president of the Didsbury Agricultural Society.

"We're excited for next year and hope to have just as good, if not better turnout."

Cigarettes stolen in FasGas break-in Didsbury RCMP report that sometime between 1:45 and 2 a.m. on June 13, the building at the FasGas station in Didsbury was broken into and several cartons of cigarettes were stolen. There are no suspects.

Diesel fuel taken

Sometime during the overnight hours between June 11 and 18, RCMP say diesel fuel has been going missing from heavy equipment parked at a construction site on Twp. Rd 292 and Highway 766.

Police are looking for anyone who has any information about the thefts to come forward.

- Frey

Fuel thefts from construction equipment

A paving company has reported numerous counts of fuel thefts from its vehicles parked on Twp. Rd. 929 and Highway 766, said Gulash.

"They're doing paving in there, and have a bunch of construction equipment there, and (between June 11 and 18) they've been finding a lot of the equipment being drained of diesel fuel," he said.

Police are asking the public to be aware of suspicious activity or vehicles in the area, particularly in evening and night hours.

"They might look like they don't belong," he said.

Anyone with information about these or any other unsolved crime in the area is asked to call Didsbury RCMP detachment or Crimestoppers at 1-800-222-TIPS.

It's time to protect property rights again.

Recent legislation has disrupted the crucial balance that has protected the fundamental property rights of Alberta's farmers and ranchers.

For the good of private property owners, for the good of our industries and for the good of all Albertans, this balance must be restored.

If elected, I will introduce a bill to affirm the vital importance of private property rights, the right to be heard and the right to fair and full compensation.

Chargers in lacrosse semifinal

BY PAUL FREY
MVP Staff

The Didsbury Chargers novice lacrosse team was one win away from claiming the Central Alberta Lacrosse League championship after a 6-0 defeat at the hands of the Red Deer Chiefs on June 22.

The Chargers remained alive despite the loss due to the double knock-out format of the playoffs.

Previous to the loss against the Chiefs, the Chargers hadn't lost a playoff game, dispatching the Lacoka Locos 4-2 on June 21 to advance to the final. The Chargers beat the same Chiefs squad that blanked them on June 22, 4-3 in overtime on June 16 after having led for much of that game. The Chargers held a 3-2 advantage on June 16 with only a couple of minutes left on the clock before the Chiefs tied the game and sent it into overtime.

"It was a very good game. It was very close," said Phillip Litke, coach of the Chargers.

The Chargers opened the playoffs by beating the Sylvan Lake Buccaneers 4-1 on June 15 after receiving a bye into the second round. Litke said the team played well in the game against the Buccaneers.

"They played amazing. It was an awesome game, very defensive, but they played very well," he said, adding this particular group is the best he's coached in six years of coaching lacrosse. "They play as a team, they're very cohesive. We don't have to rely on one guy. Everybody contributes, and right now, everybody's playing their best."

Biker clubs such as the Bikers For Christ, the Canadian Army Veteran motorcycle units and The Iron Society also support the ride by coming out in force. Many members of those groups act as traffic control for the ride, Ehns explained.

"They put the vest on and they ... will really help us with the traffic control (at intersections). That's what they're good at ... and it's just incredible to watch these guys do that," Ehns said.

Jordan Sontag, one of the participants in the ride, who departed from Red Deer, said he and a group of six friends came out for a second year for the ride to help support the cause. A friend's father has prostate cancer, so the group thought in order to show support they would raise money and participate in the ride.

"We had a team last year and a team this year as well and we basically started because one of our best friends' father suffers from prostate cancer, so we ride in support of that. It's just a great event. We really enjoy it. It's very well organized and a fantastic cause," he said.

Drew Proudler, who is part of the Iron Society, also departed from Red Deer. He said he enjoyed the ride, despite the weather not cooperating at the start. About eight members of the Iron Society club joined Proudler on the ride.

"Overall it went really well and I think everybody had fun," he said. "I love doing rides, especially ones that support mental and physical health."

All money raised during the ride stays in Alberta. Ehns said the Ride For Dad local chapter has raised almost $500,000 since its inception.

Staff Sgt. John Guigon of the Calgary ICE unit said: "What we were doing basically was monitoring peer-to-peer networks. Those are computers connected to the Internet that allow people to share files with each other."

"Some of the types of files some people share are child sexual exploitation images. We came across a person at a specific IP address that had in their possession suspected child pornography images and we were able to download those images. That's what led us to

Mr. Jensen."

Guigon said police downloaded "multiple" images from Jensen's computer.

More than 150 people were arrested as part of the national investigation.

Police seized almost two million images and videos during the national investigation, dubbed Snapshot III.

The investigation targeted high-risk offenders who were evaluated on several factors including individuals who had access to children, who are in positions of trust or authority, and who were attempting to communicate with children for a sexual purpose, police said.

ALERT members assisted the national operation, which was coordinated by the RCMP's National Child Exploitation Coordination Centre.

ALERT is made up of nearly 400 municipal police, RCMP and sheriffs. It was established and funded by the provincial government.

ALERT's Internet child exploitation unit strives to protect children from a variety of sexual offences including computer-related sexual abuse.

Jensen is scheduled to make his first appearance in Didsbury provincial court on July 7.

Time for off-highway vehicle helmet bylaws

The provincial government has just wrapped up consultations with municipalities regarding the possibility of making helmet use mandatory for all youths operating off-highway vehicles (OHV) on public land.

DAN SINGLETON

The consultations are part of the Alberta Traffic Safety Plan 2015 aimed at improving overall road safety in urban and rural communities.

In calling for input from municipalities, including from Mountain View and Red Deer counties, Alberta Transportation officials said the government is examining possible new rules in hopes of making OHV use safer for young people.

"One option we are exploring is to align the rules for off-highway vehicles with the rules for bicycles; that is, to require all OHV operators and passengers under the age of 18 to wear a helmet while on public land," said Wendy Doyle, executive director of the Office of Traffic Safety with Alberta Transportation.

While the consultations just completed may eventually end up being part of a provincewide legislative solution, any such solution will certainly take time to make its way through the exhaustive process required to bring about such changes.

And all the while, young people will continue to be free to operate OHVs while not wearing approved helmets.

While it is everyone's hope that no young OHV operators will be injured or even killed over the next months because they are not wearing helmets, a more immediate solution may already be at hand.

That is, municipalities currently have the authority to create OHV helmet bylaws for their respective jurisdictions.

"The government of Alberta believes municipalities are in the best position to understand the safety needs of their communities," said Doyle. "Because of this, we would like to see municipalities continue to have the authority to create bylaws to enhance the proposed provincial helmet requirement."

Neither Mountain View nor Red Deer county currently has an OHV helmet bylaw in place.

Yet with residents and visitors of all ages making extensive use of OHVs in recreational areas across both counties, particularly during the very busy summer season, isn't it time for those same municipalities to pass OHV helmet bylaws?

It is probably surprising for many residents to learn that Alberta youths are required to wear helmets while riding bicycles but not when operating powerful motorized OHVs. It is a dangerous and wholly unacceptable situation that must be rectified.

As such, the provincial government should move as quickly as possible to put this situation right – and in the meantime, West Central Alberta municipalities should also act without delay.

Flawed climate models lead to costly public policy

MICHELLE STIRLING-ANOSH

During a presentation in Calgary recently, economist Ross McKittrick told his audience that we should be more concerned about the flaws inherent in climate models than the current 16-plus-year pause in global warming.

McKittrick pointed out that historically computer models had had some parity with recorded temperatures, but that changed when the models began to dramatically depart from observed temperatures after 1998. Prior to that, the longest previous span of separation was nine years. The present disparity is now into its 16th year.

Climate models are based on perhaps the most complex mathematical models ever designed, but they are still just a crude approximation of the intricacies of natural forces, such as that of the ocean-atmospheric systems.

While the models have been consistently predicting significantly rising temperatures, actual temperatures are flat. From 1998 to 2014 carbon dioxide (CO2) levels rose nine per cent with no rise in temperatures, contradicting the fundamental premise of Anthropogenic Global Warming. That must mean there is a basic flaw in the climate model. Climate model error growth is cumulative and compounding.

McKittrick told his audience that warming trends have in fact fallen off since 2000, which indicates that global temperatures are actually cooling.

Using another forecasting tool called the Integrated Assessment

Models, economists try to assess the "social costs of carbon" to set policy on carbon taxes. Unfortunately, as these are calibrated to the faulty climate models, errors are amplified.

The margins of error in the climate model, McKittrick said, are by no means small. The climate models predicted a global surface temperature rise from 1998 to 2013 that is five times the actual temperature rise as determined by the Hadley Centre in the U.K. In fact, he said the divergence between observed temperatures and climate model predictions is now so great it is unlikely they will converge again.

Basing public policy on these exaggerated and flawed models should concern us all, McKittrick added, because governments use them to set greenhouse gas reduction targets and climate policies. Those policies affect the cost of everything, from our insurance rates to our vehicle prices to our home energy bill, to the sustainability of our investments and pension funds.

The likely error in the models, McKittrick said, stems from the fact that the effect of CO2 on warming, or the climate sensitivity of CO2, has been exaggerated.

Further, as Israeli astrophysicist Nir Shaviv says, the models exclude the quantifiable effect of the sun: "... the IPCC is still doing its best to avoid the evidence that the sun has a large effect on climate. They of course will never admit this quantifiable effect because it would completely tear down the line of argumentation for a mostly man-made global warming of a very sensitive climate."

And while governments are using flawed calculations to set emissions taxes and targets, ironically these calculations generally omit the benefits of our modern, carbon-based society – such as medical, educational, work and recreational opportunities, not to mention the benefits of higher crop production which results from CO2 fertilization.

McKittrick also warned his audience not to be fooled by the apparent precision of the social cost of carbon damages, calculated to seven digits, citing economist Robert S. Pindyck who wrote in the Journal of Economic Literature that: "[The] models are so deeply flawed as to be close to useless as tools for policy analysis. Worse yet, their use suggests a level of knowledge and precision that is simply illusory, and can be highly misleading."

McKittrick advises policy-makers to wait two to four years before deciding if any drastic new climate policy measures are necessary.

In the meantime, public and policy-makers should also be wary of claims of the alleged social costs of carbon that fail to account for the benefits.

Michelle Stirling-Anosh is the Communications Manager of Friends of Science. Ross McKittrick's presentation "The Pause in Global Warming: Climate Policy Implications" can be viewed online <http://www.friendsofscience.org/index.php?id=750http://h>

Minister says Cremona viable with some work

BY KEVIN VINK
MVP Staff

Cremona is a viable village – if a new letter of recommendations from Greg Weadick, provincial Municipal Affairs minister, is any indication.

The letter recently came before Cremona's council, outlining 21 recommendations for the council to follow if it is to make sure the municipality is viable now and into the future.

Weadick wrote that the village would be viable based on the completion of those recommendations.

Cremona mayor Tim Hagen said one of the best things about the list is that the village's council has already been working towards a majority of the points mentioned by the minister in his letter.

"So we kind of all knew what the issues were, it's just a matter of getting them done," said Hagen.

Although it is a sizeable list to work on, he said council will be able to chop away at the items, although many will take time and others will take money.

The list of 21 recommendations includes the following: continued reviews of old or outdated bylaws; development and regular review of a strategic plan; development of a communication plan; and a review of the village amortization to keep it in line with budget and variance reports.

Although there are more recommendations as well, perhaps the most challenging one will be the development and implementation of a multi-year infrastructure plan, said Hagen.

"The problem with infrastructure is it takes time and a lot of money," he said.

Hagen noted the provincial government does offer grants, but in many cases towns need to come up with 25 per cent of the funding on their own before they receive the grants.

For example, he cited the work that needs to be done on the sewage lagoon, which will cost an estimated $8 million.

"So if they gave us three-quarters of that, we're still looking at over $2 million that we have to come up with, and by law we can't even borrow that much, so it makes it difficult," he said.

"So we just have to do the things like introducing the low-flow toilets. We've gotta continue doing things like that and coming up with ways that will make our lagoon last us a while yet. But it's always a struggle with small villages. They get into positions like this and they really have a hard time doing anything."

TIM HAGEN
Cremona mayor

Councillors have to get creative to deal with the fact that they don't have a lot of tax revenue, but he said both he and the village councillors are willing to work at it.

The last time the lagoon was dredged was in 1982, and he noted if the village were to do something like that, it would likely extend the life of the lagoon for an additional 10 to 15 years.

"And we're always looking at things like that," he said.

As far as the full list of recommendations, a copy of the letter in full was sent out to all Cremona residences, and Hagen said council will continue on the work that it already set forth and make an effort to cross as many items off the list as possible.

"We're at least trying to listen to what everybody has to say and try to do our best to do what is best for the village, and so far everybody seems to be accepting that as it is," he said.

In Loving Memory of My Dad
Alex Hunter
Who passed away June 26, 2006

You are too precious to be forgotten,
And too priceless to be ever replaced.
You were one in a million,
and you'll always be...
The precious and unique dad
I cared for, so dearly...
There are so many things
I wish I had said and done...
But sadly can no longer do,
now that you are gone...
But I want you to know
That though you're out of sight,
You'll always be in my heart.
I want you to know that
I'll always cherish you, I'll always love you
And always remember you...
Forever will you live on,
in my heart and mind...
Forever will you live in my thoughts and never die...
And until that day, when we shall meet again,
I'll continue to cherish
all my memories of you
Sadly missed and always remembered by Lorraine, Grant and family

Alex Hunter
Passed June 26th, 2006
If I could have a lifetime wish and one dream that could come true
I would pray to God with all my heart
Just to see and speak to you
A thousand words won't bring you back
I know because I tried and neither will a million tears
I know because I've cried
You've left behind my broken heart and precious memories too but I never wanted memories
I only wanted you
Forever in my heart
Your loving wife Cathie
